MIKE'S WOODEN TULIPS

FEBRUARY 15, 2010 | ANNA

When the Blomquists were here over Christmas, Mike asked about the wooden tulips we had bought in Amsterdam, in the neighborhood where my dad grew up. We found several different types, some way too bright and garish. The ones we ended up with looked a little “used” but they have a nice patina (as they say on Antiques Roadshow) and I like to keep them in one of my favorite vases to provide color and happy memories in all seasons.

One day a few weeks ago Mike texted me and asked if I could email him a photo of the tulips. With my new iPhone camera, no problem!

Soon I received the photo below. How does he do it?!
