BIKING ON COYOTE CREEK

APRIL 23, 2016 | ANNA

Biking the Coyote Creek trail

Today (April 23, 2016) Dick and I did a thoroughly satisfying bike ride on the Coyote Creek Trail, which is also one of our favorite running trails. The middle part of the trail where we usually run is only a mile or two from our apartment.

Today we drove down to Morgan Hill, the trail's southern terminus, and started our ride from there. The weather was perfect: cool but comfortable temperature, a light breeze blowing, puffy clouds drifting across a vivid blue sky. Most of our favorite wildflowers are still in bloom: poppies, lupine, and purple vetch. The creeks are still "babbling," and the ponds are filled to the brim and overflowing.

We topped it off with lunch at Odeum in Morgan Hill.

A perfect day in every way!
