SEQUOIA AND KING'S CANYON PARKS, CALIFORNIA

NOVEMBER 21, 2016 | ANNA

During the weekend of November 18-20, 2016, we drove from San Jose to Sequoia and King's Canyon parks in the Sierra.

We stopped along the way in Lemon Cove, near Visalia, to see a tiny house park. They are the cutest!

In the park we stayed at Wuksachi Lodge, which offered nice accommodations and good food. We hiked all three days, with Saturday being our longest at 6-7 miles through the General Sherman area of the Big Trees (which are magnificent!).

The weather cooperated and was perfect for both hiking and photography, with some clouds and some sun. On Sunday we even had a few snow flurries for extra interest.

On Friday night we were treated to a “starry sky” talk, led by Ranger Tara, which we both enjoyed. It was so dark that the Milky Way was really “milky.”
