

News from Nan

TRAVEL

DAFFODIL HILL: CLOSED AGAIN

MARCH 30, 2017 | ANNA

On Thursday, March 23, 2017, we drove up to the Sierra foothills; the focus of the trip was Daffodil Hill, near the tiny town of Volcano, which should have been in full bloom. This was our second visit (or was it the third?) and, again, we arrived at the gates to find them closed. What a disappointment!

The rain also dampened our spirits, but we did slog up and down Highway 49 as far north as Plymouth and as far south as Jackson. Luckily we saw daffodils and other spring flowers in a number of other places, but they didn't make up for missing the daffodil "mother lode," so to speak.

Yellow tulips in Plymouth

Balcony of the St George Hotel, Volcano

Protestant cemetery in Volcano (earliest grave: 1850)

Gravestone and flag, Volcano

Weeping angel, Catholic cemetery, Volcano

Madonna, Catholic cemetery, Volcano

◀ 2017   ◀ CALIFORNIA   ◀ DAFFODIL HILL   ◀ GARDEN   ◀ JOHNSON   ◀ PHOTOGRAPHY   ◀ VAN RAAPHORST
◀ VOLCANO