CORONA DIARY #18: ANNA AND DICK (FINALLY) GET COVID

JUNE 8, 2023 | ANNA

Our first “Corona Diary” post was in March of 2020. What we thought was the last post (#17) in that set was published on March 21, 2021. We thought we didn’t have any more to say about COVID-19. By now it’s pretty much off everyone’s radar.

However, lucky us, two weeks ago, after 3 years, 5 vaccinations (for Dick; it was “only” 4 for Anna), and as much prudent behavior (masking, isolation, etc) as we could muster, somewhere between home and Minnesota, Dick picked up a stray Coronavirus germ and very quickly passed it along to both Anna and Gillian (who had already “participated,” along with her whole family).

Thank goodness our little virus chain seems to have stopped there.

Dick and I both had rather classic symptoms. We both had some fever. Anna lost her sense of taste and smell, but thank goodness it has come back. Dick took Paxlovid, but Anna couldn’t because it doesn’t “play” well with Pradaxa. We muddled through.

We are happy to report that we are now virus-free and happy to have our lives and freedom back. Whew! We certainly hope this is REALLY the end of that story!
