convoys from New York to Belfast and Londonderry, Ireland. From January 1945 to late May she escorted convoys between the United States, France, and Britain. That April, Richey rescued 32 men from two tankers that had collided and caught fire, SS Nasbulk and SS St. Mihiel.

Following arrival in New York in May and overhaul, she proceeded via Cuba and the Panama Canal to the Pacific where she reported in July to the North Pacific Fleet at Adak, Alaska. In September she occupied the Japanese naval base at Ominato, northern Honshu, Japan. After a return to Adak, she sailed via Okinawa to Taku, China, to assist the occupation forces.

In March 1950 she entered the Atlantic Reserve Fleet. Loaned to the Coast Guard 1 April 1952, she was subsequently returned and entered the Pacific Reserve Fleet in June 1954, where she remained until struck from the Navy list 30 June 1968, and sunk as a target.

Death Notes:
We learned in early 2002 from my sister Karen that Dick Starr had died almost a year earlier. His annual health checkup had found that he had an aneurism. He had surgery for it, but did not recover from it and died about a week later. By searching the Web I found he had been remembered by ICN Pharmaceuticals Inc, where he had been on their Board of Directors.
